

SYNOPSIS

The Prophet, by celebrated Lebanese author Kahlil Gibran, is among the most popular volumes of poetry ever written, selling over 100 million copies in forty languages since its publication in 1923. Gibran's timeless verses have been given enchanting new form in this painterly cinematic adventure about freedom and the power of human expression.

This breathtaking animated feature, produced and spearheaded by Salma Hayek, was an official selection at Cannes and made its North American premiere at Toronto International Film Festival. Written and directed by Roger Allers (The Lion King), the film intersperses Gibran's elegant poetry within stunning animated sequences by filmmakers Tomm Moore (The Secret of Kells, Song of the Sea), Bill Plympton (Guide Dog), Joan Gratz (Mona Lisa Descending a Staircase), Nina Paley (Sita Sings the Blues), and a host of award-winning animators from around the world. Set in a Mediterranean sea-side village, Kamila (Salma Hayek) cleans house for exiled artist and poet Mustafa (Liam Neeson), but the more difficult job is keeping her free-spirited young daughter, Almitra, (Quvenzhané Wallis) out of trouble. The three embark on a journey meant to end with Mustafa's return home – but first they must evade the authorities who fear that the truth in his words will incite rebellion.

Featuring music from Damien Rice, Glen Hansard and Yo-Yo Ma.

KAHLIL GIBRAN AND THE BOOK THE PROPHET

Kahlil Gibran is celebrated in Lebanon as a literary hero, and is believed to be the third-best-selling poet of all time, behind Shakespeare and Laozi.

Gibran is best known in the English-speaking world for his 1923 book The Prophet, an inspirational series of 26 philosophical essays written in poetic English prose. Since it was first published in 1923, The Prophet has never been out of print. Having been translated into more than 40 languages, it was one of the bestselling books of the twentieth century in the United States. A new paperback edition will be released in July 2015 by Random House.

Gibran was born in the town of Bsharri in the north of modern-day Lebanon (then part of Mount Lebanon Mutasarrifate, Ottoman Empire), to a Maronite Catholic family. As a young man, he immigrated with his family to the United States, settling in Boston, where he studied art and began his literary career, writing in both English and Arabic. In the Arab world, Gibran is regarded as a literary and political rebel. His romantic style was at the heart of a renaissance in modern Arabic literature (especially prose poetry), breaking away from the classical school.

In addition to writing, Gibran was an accomplished visual artist, whose watercolor paintings and sketches appear in the permanent collections of several galleries, most notably the Telfair Museum of Art in Savannah, GA. He died in 1931, at the age of 48.

"I love you, my brother, whoever you are - whether you worship in a church, kneel in your temple, or pray in your mosque. You and I are children of one faith, fingers of the loving hand of the one supreme being, a hand extended to all."

DIRECTOR'S STATEMENT

ROGER ALLERS on Kahlil Gibran's The Prophet

Kahlil Gibran's book The Prophet has inspired millions of people since it was published in 1923, and I was among those moved by its poetry and insight. Indeed, while reading it for the first time when I was 20, I experienced a profound shift in consciousness; a "connectedness" to everything that was so deep it has stayed with me the following 45 years.

It has been my pleasure and privilege to adapt Gibran's book for the screen. My role has been to create a larger narrative out of Gibran's slim story and edit his poetic chapters back into the flow. I have done so with all reverence to Gibran's philosophy and also with his desire to unify all peoples of different faiths and backgrounds.

In the spirit of unity and diversity, I have joined forces with the visions of other artists to bring interpretations of Gibran's chapters to life. Animators from around the world have contributed their unique talents and styles to illuminate some of Gibran's most beloved verse. We have been like monks painting elaborate pages of a larger manuscript, but connected through a digital network of communication.

Not just artists, but there were many more—composers, musicians, producers, financiers from different parts of the world—who were inspired and gave of their energy, time, and the riches of their hearts.

In the words of Kahlil Gibran, "Work is Love made visible."

Academy Award Nominee Salma Hayek has proven herself as a prolific actress, producer and director, in both film and television. She was nominated for an Academy Award, Golden Globe, Screen Actors Guild and a BAFTA award for her leading role in Julie Taymor's Frida. Following The Prophet she will star alongside Pierce Brosnan and Jessica Alba in the romantic comedy, Some Kind of Beautiful, releasing August 21st.

Hayek has several other films set for release late 2015, early 2016 including Septembers of Shiraz alongside Adrien Brody, in which she plays the matriarch of a family crumbling in the wake of the Islamic revolution in 70's era Iran. Then there is Tale of Tales by acclaimed Italian director Matteo Garrone.

Noted for her acting career, Hayek has also dedicated much of her time to social activism. Hayek served as spokesperson for the Pampers/UNICEF partnership worldwide, to help stop the spread of life-threatening maternal and neonatal tetanus. She also served as the spokesperson for the Avon Foundation's Speak Out Against Domestic Violence program, which focuses on domestic violence education, awareness and prevention, as well as support for victims. In 2005, she spoke in front of the US Senate, encouraging its members to extend the Violence Against Women Act. In January 2006, the legislation was passed, ensuring that 3.9 billion dollars will be allocated to thousands of domestic violence crises and intervention agencies throughout the US. In April of 2005, Hayek visited the Arctic Circle for the celebration of Earth Day, in an effort to bring attention to the dangers that global warming is putting on the lives of the Inuit people and the rest of the world. In November 2005, she served as co-host, alongside Julianne Moore, at the Nobel Peace Prize Concert in Oslo, which honored Nobel laureate Mohamed el-Baradei and the UN's International Atomic Energy Agency. She was also part of the One campaign that singer and activist Bono created, as well as a member of Global Green, and Youth Aids.

In 2013, Hayek, alongside Beyonce Knowles-Carter and Frida Giannini, the then creative director of Gucci, co-founded CHIME FOR CHANGE, an organization dedicated to improving the education, help and welfare of women and girls around the world.

PRODUCER'S STATEMENT

SALMA HAYEK-PINAULT

The first time I ever saw the book, The Prophet by Kahlil Gibran, I was six years old. My Lebanese grandfather kept it by his bedside. I was too young to read it, but I understood that it was a little treasure for him, a cherished object, and I was intrigued by its contents and the drawing of the mysterious man on its cover.

It wasn't until my late teens that I actually experienced its beauty and power. As a teenager the poem that touched me most was the one about love. In my 20's and 30's it was the one about good and evil. And now it's the poem about children. That's what this book is, and what I hope the film is. It changes as you change.

It is a book of wisdom and philosophy, but it's a simple philosophy, about the simple things in life that bond us together, like eating and drinking, and children, and love, and death. It is significant to me that it is an Arab writer who came up with this philosophy that goes beyond religion and is inclusive of everyone. It goes to the profound and simple place where we are all the same because we are humans that feel and care for our children and care for our life and ponder upon death. It's about connecting, about starting conversations, about exposing children to the beauty of who they are as human beings so they can see the beauty in others.

Kahlil Gibran loves life. Every poem is a love affair with life and this is a movie about life. The movie is a very personal experience for the viewer. The viewer is driving the boat, not the film. It's an experience for families that is both entertaining and inspirational. I think the whole world can use this message of peace, something that's uplifting and joyous, and that they can share with their whole family.

This movie is also a love letter to my heritage. It is one of the most personal projects I have ever undertaken and I am extremely proud of it. So, on behalf of everyone involved in making this film, I invite you to explore the film, and to discover for yourself the joy of Kahlil Gibran's world.

THE COMPOSER

GABRIEL YARED

My story with The Prophet by Kahlil Gibran goes back to my teenage years in Lebanon, when I discovered, read and reread his book. It sounded like music to my ears! As well as this, when I was 17, I was hired by the Gibran Committee from his native village, Bsharri, to write music for “Sound and Light”, a show dedicated to him.

More than 40 years later, it was Salma Hayek who brought me back to the book. She came to me and talked about her idea of producing a film based on this book. I was immediately enthusiastic about the concept of this central story, written and directed by Roger Allers, punctuated by 8 chapters from the book, each one directed by 8 different directors.

The first two pieces I composed, long before working on the central story, were: On Death, which was still in its storyboard form from the Brizzi brothers, and On Marriage, inspired by a script written by Joann Sfar.

These were the two pieces that set the tone for what was to follow, both in terms of style and instrumentation.

For On Death, I wrote a slow waltz for solo cello and orchestra, as I had in mind Salma’s incredible proposition to have YoYo Ma as the soloist!

For On Marriage, I created a kind of Oriental Tango for which I used oriental instruments such as the Ney, the Kanun, the Oud, oriental percussion, accordion and a Hungarian cymbalum. All was combined with a string orchestra, resulting in a kind of ecumenical, universal musical experience.

Later in the composition process, I decided to use the Ney (and sometimes the Kanun) as the “voice” of the character Almitra, who does not speak, a character for whom I had immediate sympathy, and, for me, seems to be the backbone of the film.

This music was an ideal opportunity to go back and find my Lebanese-oriental roots again, and to allow these elements to work in harmony with my eclectic style. I put all my heart and soul into my work to score this wonderful animation and to try to find the deeper meaning of the book through the music. The Prophet gave me wings and so did my collaboration with Roger and Salma. It reminds me of one of Gibran’s most beautiful phrases “Work is Love made visible” to which I would add “and audible”!

The recording session took place at Abbey Road Studios with Peter Cobbin as engineer, and with musicians of all nationalities, English, Lebanese, Moroccan, Tunisian, Egyptian, Syrian, Greek and more... This perfectly reflected the universal harmony described and so desired by Kahlil Gibran.
